Mrs. Crane recorded one of the stories handed down by Perry to his children. It happened one night when the Henderson boys and the Crane boys decided to visit the still of a bootlegger somewhere in the area of Blanche, AL. It was necessary for them to go thru this cemetery since it was the shortest route. There was a well near the cemetery and as they approached the well this figure which was a woman came up out of the well. Perry said if he had been wearing a hat it would have been several inches off his head because his hair stood straight up. The boys decided against going to the still. The next day the rumor in the neighborhood was the still had been raided.

Perry and George were good musicians. Cola McRae had told Mrs. Crane about a song George would sing about the boll weevil and Cola thought George had written it. The Henderson boys could put on a good show.
